

Section 8. The river widens dramatically to show two carefully rendered boats moored on it. In the boat to the left, whose stern is visible, a man dozes under a roof from which hang several circular rain-hats and rain coats made from bundles of straw.

At the top of the section, another woman rides a donkey. Immediately to her right is a store selling paper goods to be burned at funerals. Inside the shop is a man, presumably the Mr. Wang whose name appears on the shop's sign, "The Wang Family Paper Goods" (王家紙馬). Extending into the street is a paper model of a multi-storey house.
